The university has established comprehensive anti-ragging measures to ensure a safe and respectful campus environment. Each year, anti-ragging squads are organized to proactively prevent ragging incidents. These squads regularly patrol the campus and monitor key areas such as hostels, canteens, and recreational facilities. They respond promptly to any reported ragging incidents, carrying out thorough investigations and taking immediate actions to halt any harassment. Awareness campaigns are held to inform students about the severe consequences of ragging and the importance of fostering a respectful atmosphere. Victims of ragging receive immediate support and counseling to help them cope with their experiences. The squads meticulously document all incidents and report them to higher authorities for further action. They collaborate closely with faculty, administration, and law enforcement to ensure a thorough approach to preventing and addressing ragging. Strict enforcement of anti-ragging policies and disciplinary actions against offenders reinforce the university's zero-tolerance policy on ragging. Regular anti-ragging programs promote a culture of safety and respect. All students are required to submit affidavits pledging not to engage in ragging, emphasizing the university's serious stance on this issue. Permanent anti-ragging boards are installed in every college and significant office throughout the university to ensure high visibility and ongoing awareness.

The University adheres to its academic regulations to ensure discipline among students. At the hostel level, wardens enforce these regulations to maintain order. In serious cases, the issues are escalated to the chief warden or the concerned Dean of the colleges. These cases are then reviewed by the College Discipline Board. If the matter is particularly serious or involves multiple colleges, it is referred to the University Discipline Committee, which includes the Deans of the Colleges and the Dean of Student Welfare (DSW) as the Member Secretary. The Vice Chancellor, based on the recommendations of the Discipline Committee, approves the necessary disciplinary actions. Various cases have been addressed, including those received from the University Grants Commission (UGC) and other implementing agencies.
